

Kelly Peterson Nov 20

Kudos to you for doing this and asking for feedback! Great idea.

- maybe add "&" instead of a slash for race and ethnicity so students can choose to put both or not
- I'm wondering if "Ability and mental health" might be a little more descriptive and broad? I looked up another identity wheel and they had "abilities and qualities"
- Up to you, but I would put the blank ones next to each other so students know that they are intentionally blank.
- I wonder if parental status could be one because that impacts a lot of students

[Redacted] Nov 20

Thanks, Kelly! I'll change the / to & for Race & ethnicity. I really like your suggestion for "Parental Status"! We could also word the ability one as "Ability status"? OR What if we changed it to "Mental & Physical Health"? Maybe in the midst of this pandemic, adding the category of overall health is applicable? I'm trying to think of verbage that will resonate clearly with middle schoolers, too. I found another sample that included for kids: "Number of siblings" and "Birth order", both of which I like! (I think those could be combined, too.)

Other suggestions anyone?

Kelly Peterson Nov 20

I like mental and physical health!

[Redacted] Nov 20

OK - I just updated the wheel...I still need to "polish" the position/size of some of the text boxes, but tell me what you think of version 2.0! :)

Kelly Peterson Nov 20

You might have decided differently, but just reminding you that you were thinking of putting "&" for race and ethnicity! Looks great.

[Redacted] Nov 20

Oops! Yup, Kelly - Thanks! I just forgot to make that change before I posted my update. It's fixed now!

